FOR 1910

After Senator Dick outgeneraled his political opponents at the Columbus convention, and outwitted the insurgents, who wanted a progressive platform, and proudly mounted the stage and rammed down the throats of the delegates a stand-by-Taft stand-pat platform, he rushed off to Beverly to talk over campaign plans with President Taft before the arrival of Harding. ARE YOU WILFULLY

Every laborer in Ohio knows that the price of woolen clothing has gone sky high. Every farmer knows the price of his wool is down in the sub-cellar. Both agree that the tariff, dictated by the monopolists, and accepted in the Taft-Aldrich-Payne bill, is framed for the eastern manufacturer, and both ought to get busy to repudiate a party responsible for the law.

Warren G. Harding sald in a speech at Cleveland April 20, 1910, as reported in the Cleveland Leader, that this tariff is the best that any congress had yet produced. He said that before he was nominated for governor. His platform says of it, "No tariff bill was ever more unjustly

The Cleveland Leader, a Republican paper, said editorially after the platform was adopted, "None but the wilfully blind can fall to see the widespread disappointment among Ohio Republicans over the outcome of the platform fight at Columbus."
